Honoring those who served

Across Sampson, veteran recognitions displayed proudly

Every Memorial Day, Ann Knowles pays homage to men and women who gave their lives protecting America's freedom.

Several months later the respect continues when community members come together for Veterans Day. As the director of the Sampson County Veterans Services Office, she believes two days are not enough.

"When we see a veteran, we should thank them for their service," Knowles said. "A lot of veterans belong to organizations and they'll have a cap with Vietnam, Korea or World War II...stop them and say 'thank you for your service,'"

"A lot of them never got that and it means a lot to them," she said. "This country as a whole and Sampson County would not be what it is, if it were not for those veterans."

One way residents are paying respect is through monuments and projects such as the Sampson County Military and Veterans Museum, a state-of-the-art building to honor the military. Funding for the project was made possible by civic organizations, companies, residents and grant funding such as a capital grant from the Sampson County Convention & Visitors Bureau. After its completed, it will be another addition the Sampson County History Museum.

Kay Raynor, president of the Sampson County History Museum, said the veterans will remain important to the Sampson County and the United States. Like many other museum officials, she believes it's a great way of showing gratitude to men and women who served.

"It's a way of saying thank you and showing appreciation for the service and the sacrifices they've made for our freedom," Raynor said.

Museum Director Chris Woodson and other officials will continue to make progress through 2019 by working on the interior of the building, which sits next to the main entrance. If plans stay on track, the museum will probably open its doors

COMMUNITY

We're proud to be a part of the communities we serve. We show our commitment to helping others with programs such as Ronald McDonald House Charities® programs and the RMHC® /HACER® National Scholarships. And through involvement in youth sports, local charities, and events that inspire the world, it's clear that giving back is an essential part of the way we operate every day.

Each year our employees can apply to receive the Ray Kroc Scholarship for $1K to support their continued education. This year, local McDonald's provided $45,000 in scholarships to 45 employees.

Congratulations to each of you and best of luck to you on your education journey!

THIS IS YOUR MOMENT

We have the scholarships, you have what it takes.

There's a lot more to McDonald's than the Big Mac. The McDonald's HACER® scholarship program grants scholarships and college resources for eligible Hispanic students. With opportunities on national levels, HACER® is one of the largest programs committed to college scholarships for Hispanics. So what are you waiting for? This is your moment.

“We're working very diligently on it,” Raynor said.

Woodson said the museum will cover more than 200 years of the county's military history, which includes recent war conflicts for the educational experience. One of the goals is to have touchscreen kiosks to tell the stories of different veterans who have earned the Medal of Honor, along with other features.

“There's going to be a few other things throughout the museum that are interactive in nature that the visitors can experience,” Woodson said.

One of the missions is to recognize Sampson County's contributions to the United States Armed Forces, with hopes that the history will be around for future generations.

“We want to preserve our past, so future generations will have an opportunity to see it and experience it,” Raynor said.

Like Knowles, Woodson emphasizes that veterans should be thought about more than several days a year such as Memorial Day or Veterans Day.

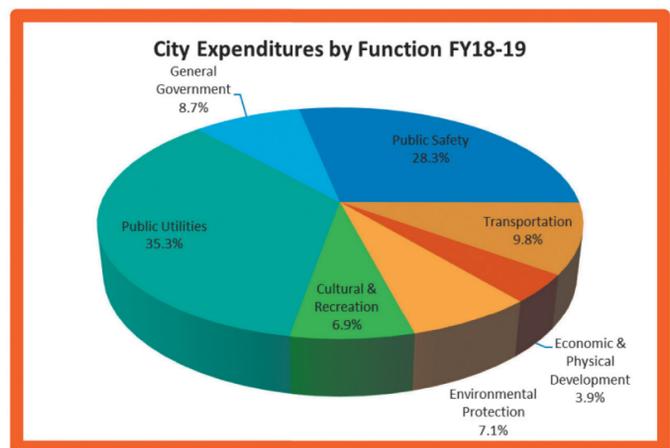

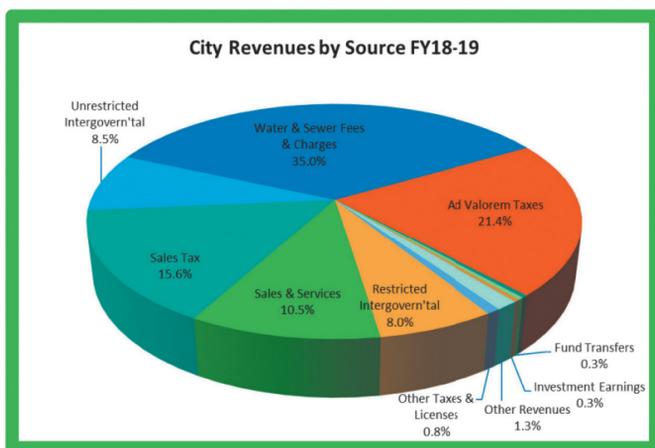

Mannequins in military outfits will be one of several features of the new military museum.

The Sampson County Military and Veterans Museum.

"It's an ongoing honor," Woodson said. "We still have people serving in harm's way even today. There's never enough that we can do to honor them throughout the year, rather than just certain day."

Fundraising efforts for the museum are ongoing. For more information, contact the museum at 910-590-0007 or by email at schm@intrstar.net. Donations may also be mailed to: Sampson County History Museum, P.O. Box 786, Clinton, N.C. 28329.

The military is one of many aspects Woodson enjoys about local history.

"They make up an important part of our county's history as well," Woodson said. "The new military museum will not only honor our military heritage, but it'll honor our veterans too."

For more than 40 years, Knowles has helped veterans in the area and believes it was a calling. In her heart, the only reason she's sitting in the office is to help them. She said the military is part of everyone's heritage regardless of their religion or skin color.

"We need to think of them for what they do represent," Knowles said. "They protected this country and protected everybody."

Knowles feels that it's important that Sampson County has a large military museum and other memorials.

"Veterans are the reason we have this country," she said. "If it weren't for what the veterans did we may not be living in the country we're living in today. We will not have the freedom and freedom is not free. Freedom comes at a price. The price that's paid is the blood from our soldiers."

Knowles is inviting veterans to add artifacts and replicas for visitors to see up close. She also excited about the progress and coming a long way from just having a metal building.

"We got a lot going on, but the most important thing I can say is that it belongs to the veterans," Knowles said. "That is their museum and we needed that in this county. We have a rich history of veterans here."

Members of the Newton Grove community feel strongly about supporting men and women who served. One of them is Janet Warren. Her gratitude sparked a major idea for a monument in the town's busy roundabout. With assistance from the North Carolina Department of Transportation and contractors, the town's Citizens Improving Newton Grove (CING) built a project to honor soldiers.

Newton Grove Circle Improvement Project includes flags to represent the United States, North Carolina and The Honor and Remember flag, it was formed by an organization of the same name, created by George Lutz. His son, George Lutz II, was killed by a sniper's bullet in Fallujah, Iraq.

Some of the symbolism include a red field to represent the blood spilled by service men and women; a blue star for active service in the military; the folded flag to honor families; and a flame as "an eternal reminder of the spirit that has departed this life yet burns on in the memory of all who knew and loved the fallen hero."

With soldiers traveling to and from Fort Bragg and Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, Warren and supporters want the soldiers to see the flags flying high and flapping in the wind.

"I think it's important to remember those who sacrificed every day for us as well as their families," Warren said. "Their families make a huge sacrifice. Unless your military or have someone that is military, you don't realize the sacrifices that are being made and the freedoms we enjoy everyday and it's all because of our veterans and those who serve currently.

"I think it's easy to lose sight of that and hopefully this will be a reminder everyday, not just on Veterans Day or Memorial Day to thank those who are serving, those who have served and those who have gone on.

Many members of Warren's family served in the military. Her father G.P. Laurent, also known as "Lucky" served in the U.S. Marine Corps.

"It was very hard," Warren said. "We missed a lot of days with our dad, rather it be a birthday, holiday or just a regular school day when you would love to share things with him, that you know you were not able to. Times have changed so much, it wasn't like we could send a text because that was so many years ago."

When her father was serving, she watched her mother, Effie, take care of things at home.

"She was the one that did it all," Warren said about her mother having to fill in when her father was overseas. "She was our chauffeur and our mom and dad at the same. She took care of fixing anything that tore up."

But during those years, Warren and her family were proud of their father's service to the country. After he retired, he became the chief of police for Newton Grove.

CING chairperson Laura Warren Wheeler led efforts for the project with other members.

"I appreciate all of the work that went into it," Warren said about about the committee's hours of planning going into the project. "I really appreciate them taking that idea and running with it and making it come to fruition."

"A lot of local residents have noticed and thanked us for doing and for realizing that it's more than just the Air Force or the Army," Wheeler said. "It's every branch. We want to continue to honor them and this is one way to do it."

Nearby at Spivey's Corner, the Blue Star Memorial was erected as a tribute to the Armed Forces who defended the United States. It's sponsored by the Just-A-Mere Garden Club with assistance from the Spivey's Corner Woodmen of the World Lodge 1034.

The Friends of Sampson County Waterways (FSCW) is dedicated to keeping the hundreds of miles of creeks and rivers of Sampson clean and clear for the enjoyment of all — whether the recreational paddler or those fishing and hunting.

There are roughly 300 miles of waterways in Sampson, and members travel sections of the various creeks and rivers in canoes, kayaks and jon boats picking up trash and debris and sawing trees that have fallen across rivers and creeks.

The group's ongoing aim is to develop and maintain access points to the waterways and traditional boating rights-of-way by removing those blockages, as well as educate the public on the importance of waterways as a valuable resource.

To that end, FSCW holds paddle trips for the public at various times throughout the year, typically during the spring and summer months. The community trips, cleanup excursions and other outreach projects are all utilized to spread the message of the importance of protecting and conserving clean water, preserving natural waterways and keeping them litter-free and open for paddling.

FSCW president Don Meece said the rivers themselves serve as a tourist attraction every year. Taking care of that precious system is vital.

"One of the major draws to this county are the rivers," Meece said.

And the effort to take care of them is ongoing.

Two decades ago, after Hurricanes Fran and Floyd tore through North Carolina, landowners dissatisfied with the perceived lack of federal response to their situation gathered to have their voices heard.

With the help of Wilson Spencer and George Upton, the group acquired a meeting room in the Old County Home and hosted a large number of people to talk about what would be done to clean up the area, notably reopening the streams. Friends of Sampson County Waterways was formed out of those meetings.

Now 20 years later, the group remains dedicated to the cause.

Partnerships with landowners, corporate members, scouts and church groups have helped keep those waterways healthy, as concerned citizens work to pick up trash, cut limbs and trees and stabilize the water banks.

Don Meece and Cebren Fussell of Friends of Sampson County Waterways present Richard Weeks of the Eastern Baptist Association a $500 check toward local cleanup efforts and recovery in the wake of Florence. In 2017, FSCW donated to the Sampson County History Museum for its new military building.

In 2015, a volunteer assembly of Coharie Indians along the Upper Great Coharie River started the Great Coharie River Initiative, with the goal of creating a navigable corridor along what initiative coordinator Philip Bell deemed "an almost forgotten waterway that flows through 4,800 acres of prime educational opportunity, potential tourism attraction and economic stimulus that is being underutilized."

The Coharie Tribe became part of the initiative as a way to clean out a portion of the Great Coharie River and allow for more navigable pathways through part of the river just of U.S. 421.

Along with being a part of the Coharie River Initiative, Bell also serves as vice president of the FSCW.

At the outset of the initiative, the groups joined and cleaned nearly two and half miles of the river. In 2016, a grant was awarded and more equipment was purchased, allowing for another two and a half miles of the river to be cleared.

In cooperation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service and the FSCW, debris removal operations are being implemented that seek to open more than 20 miles the Great Coharie River.

Further assisting in that effort, a Duke Energy Water Resource Fund grant was recently awarded that will assist in restoration efforts through the upper Great Coharie. The $86,500 grant was presented to Bell and Greg Jacobs, Coharie Tribal administrator.

Officials said the funds would allow the Great Coharie River

Initiative to continue its commitment to protecting and enhancing Sampson County waterways and the local environment.

Bell said the Coharie leaders, in partnership with FSCW, are eager to make the waterways in Sampson among the best in the state. According to Bell, the grant is a sizable step forward in reaching that benchmark.

Last year, a pristine canoe — observations suggested it was a Native American artifact, possible predating European colonization of the area — was found and retrieved from county waters. It was housed at Fort Fisher, and local officials sought to bring the artifact back home.

Along with supporting the canoe's preservation and its return to Sampson, county officials lauded Bell, Meece and others for their continuing work to preserve and protect the waterways.

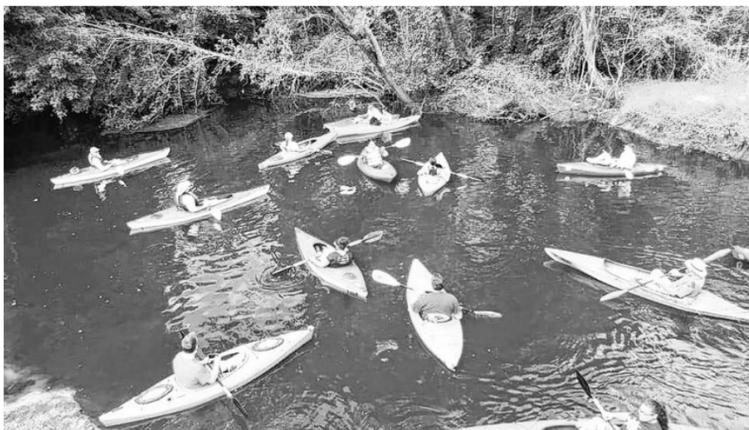

"Given the county's limited resources," the Sampson Board of Commissioners stated in a letter of support, "your organization's efforts to increase awareness of our waterways and your fiscal prudence in obtaining grant funding for these efforts is particularly commendable."

Growing up, Bell remembered when the rivers were open, and he wants to see them that way again.

"The river was our recreation department," Bell has stated. "We didn't go to town and play on some sports team."

But then, the beavers took over. Beaver management programs were implemented as a way to ward them off.

"Over time, the river became a beaver haven. It wasn't being used

As part of grant the town of Roseboro received, new signs, like this one at town hall, were erected as travelers come into town.

Clark Honeycutt has always liked the downtown area of Roseboro.

Having grown up just down the road in Salemburg, Honeycutt was familiar with the western town's downtown appeal, and when he and his wife decided they wanted to open a restaurant, the location was calling their names.

"I've always liked this building and the history behind it," Honeycutt said about his Vinny's Restaurant location on Roseboro's main street.

Honeycutt, like many others, is working to promote growth in the town to help enhance the quality of life for all of the town's citizens, as well as those visiting the area. In July 2016, the Honeycutts opened Uncle Vinny's Restaurant after purchasing the building in downtown and completely renovating the property.

Now called Vinny's, the restaurant is just one of the few businesses that has called the main thoroughfare home, but because of its success and prime location, Honeycutt and his brother-in-law have plans to open another restaurant just a few doors down.

This one, he says, will be a little different — with only enough space for about 30 people and serving steamed seafood.

"Really, the new highway going around town hasn't seemed to hurt business at all," Honeycutt said. "We believe that if you offer people good service and good food, they will come back and eat."

Since opening and changing the name, the menu has changed slightly, but Honeycutt said everything is still made fresh and in house.

"I truly feel it was a good choice to locate her," Honeycutt said. "We have a saying, 'small town feel with big town taste.' That's exactly what we offer."

Clark and Company

Cameron Wright, a fourth generation family member to own and operate a business in Roseboro, says she is proud of not only being a part of the growing trend, but loves having a little something special to offer to her customers in her downtown business, Clark & Company.

Located on West Roseboro Street right in the heart of downtown, Clark & Company is a boutique offering custom monogrammed unique clothing from dresses to bathing suits and t-shirts to children's layette outfits. According to Wright, personalized gifts range from Scout, Charles River jackets and Main Street Collections to custom team and spirit shirts for those favorite high school, college and pro teams.

Clark & Company is part of a long line of business owners in Roseboro. Like her great-grandmother, grandfather and father, Wright is proud to continue the legacy of calling the town of Roseboro and Sampson County home.

Claus.

"We're going to make a winter wonderland for them around the Christmas and holiday season," Hobbs said.

Another goal is to add more gardens and beatification projects around Roseboro to make it an "art and garden city." He added that it matches the town's motto of "Take Root and Bloom."

"Roseboro is only a one square mile city, so hopefully, I can have five of these in five years," he said. "One in every neighborhood and in every corner of the city."

With the development of the Highway 24 bypass, Hobbs stressed the importance of having more community events and places such as the garden.

STMS history

The Roseboro Small Town Main Street committee has made great strides in the last year to work and promote the growth of the town and enhance the quality of life for all of the town's citizens.

Formerly the NC STEP committee, STMS has been instrumental in helping the town complete several projects, all of which have helped improve the quality and appearance of the area.

According to committee members, the STMS program focuses on a designated downtown district and revitalizing the area.

Over the course of the last year, Roseboro has erected billboards on Hwy. 24 at both the east and west sides of town, informing travelers of opportunities to shop, live, play and work in the town. Additionally, Roseboro has two different loan programs available to qualifying businesses.

In 2008, Roseboro became part of the Small Town Main Street (STMS) program, which was designed to focus mainly on the downtown area. According to Roseboro mayor Alice Butler, the program is currently not accepting new towns, so Roseboro is very fortunate to be one of their 30 active communities.

STMS helps with development assistance by assisting in organizational development, market analysis, business assistance, promotions and design. This program is managed by the N.C. Department of Commerce.

In 2012, Roseboro was awarded the N.C. Small Town Economic Prosperity grant of $125,000 total. Through this grant, citizens of Roseboro developed a plan that focused on three strategies. According to Butler, the program worked to attract residential development, business support, renovation incentives, commercial building marketing, public area improvements and economic development organizations. Strategy two goals of the grant worked on improving the "quality of life" for both current citizens and future citizens, while the third strategy developed a marketing, signage and communications program for Roseboro.

"Both of these programs have helped Roseboro by bringing citizens and business owners together with a common goal of making sure Roseboro continues to offer the quality of life its citizens and businesses deserve," the mayor attested.

Prior to combining, the STMS committee changed the downtown zoning ordinance to grant permission for businesses to operate on the ground floor of their structure, while using the second floor as a residence. Through the STMS, the facade grant program has been established, which is now included in the town's budget and works to improve the overall aesthetics of the business.

Businesses like Rupert's Furniture, Railroad Street Steakhouse, Clark and Company, Vinny's, Carolina Dance Company and Pelican's now call the downtown area home.

"We are very fortunate to have such a wide variety of businesses in our town and it is important for our citizens to support them," Roseboro Mayor Alice Butler said.

Sampson Parks & Rec

Sampson County is a wonderful place to live, not only because of the wonderful schools, scenic road sides and friendly people, but it also has many parks and activities to enjoy as well. Your local recreation department works hard to maintain over 40 acres of land for recreational use.

Western District Park located at 702 West Clinton Street in the town of Roseboro features a one-half mile paved walking trail, pond, playground, picnic shelter, and three ballfields. This park hosts a variety of events throughout the year such as Senior Games bocce, opening day for recreation baseball/softball, Top Gun baseball/softball tournaments, NFL flag football games and even serves as the starting point for the Running with P.R.I.D.E. 5k FUNd Fiesta Run. Everyone is welcome from dusk to dawn to come out and enjoy catch and release fishing, walking, and family play on our playground.

Weeks Park located at 517 Clinton Street in the town of Newton Grove features a newly renovated playground, picnic shelter, stage, basketball court, tennis courts, and ballfield. This park is known for its wonderful 4th of July event (hosted by the Town of Newton Grove), movie nights, NFL flag football games, and spring nights of baseball and softball games. Just last year the town of Newton Grove installed new playground equipment featuring a zipline and much more to service their growing community.

For those of you looking to get involved in structured recreation activities you can find athletic activities offered year-round for ages 4 and up. Fall (September – November) sports feature adult volleyball, youth volleyball, flag football and tackle football. Our adult volleyball league welcomes team registrations for ages 16 and up.

During the winter months (December – February) basketball is offered for ages 4-18. Ages 4-6 receive valuable training through clinics once a week at local schools. Ages 7 and up welcome beginners as well as more skilled players to a fun but competitive game atmosphere.

For the upcoming spring season baseball and softball are offered in communities throughout the county. We are happy to announce the addition of baseball/softball leagues through ages 18 this year to accommodate our more mature youth.

Spring is also the start of our 50+ games. Adults can register for events that highlight talents in events such as track and field, spin casting, swimming, billiards, basketball, quilting, literary arts, performing arts, and much more.

To compliment North Carolina's typically hot summers an indoor program has been added. indoor summer soccer program that is host to over 100 participants during the months of June, July, and August. Futsal (indoor soccer) works on building ball handling skills, improving foot work and reflexes through play on a smaller playing area.

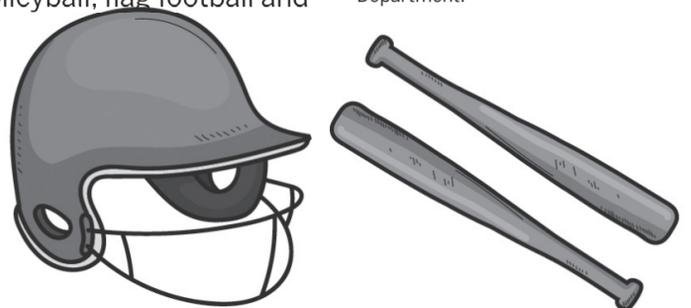

As our county continues to grow we welcome opportunities and ideas of programs to better serve. To share your ideas or for more information on any of the programs mentioned in this article contact us at 910-299-0924.

by the community anymore and what I once knew as being a part of my childhood was no longer a part of anything," Bell said.

Now he and others are working to ensure it is something, for them, their children and their grandchildren.

It's about fulfilling the mission, and making as many people aware of it as possible. Public outreach such as paddle and kayak trips help, as do the FSCW's annual Wild Game Cookout.

Delicacies such as wild hog, smoked goose, bear bites, deer sausage, rabbit stew, frog legs and squirrel salad are annually piled on plates at the annual cookout, which offers a chance to expand the palette, while educating visitors on the importance of maintaining and preserving Sampson's river system.

The event has grown in popularity over the years. It all started about a quarter century ago in the backyard of one of FSCW's original founders, Ralph Hamilton, "but it got too big for my backyard," Hamilton has said.

It was taken from there to the parking lot of Owens Furniture, and then moved to the City Market several years ago. Most of the people who attend are from the county, but there are others who come from outside Sampson — some from out of state — to attend a unique event while supporting the local waterways group.

A kayak is raffled and attendees are able to celebrate the bounty of the land while helping raise funds to support the FSCW's river maintenance trips.

Countless hours are volunteered, but waterways can't be cleaned for free. There is equipment involved. While the amount raised through the cookout is often a nominal one after expenses, every bit helps —and it all goes toward the waterways.

Along with grant funding and the hard work of many dedicated individuals, the county's resource has become cleaner and more open.

The Great Coharie River spans about 43.5 miles. Eventually, Bell wants to see the entire area clear, so that anyone who wishes could make their way from Sampson to the coast without leaving the water.

CELEBRATING OUR SUPERHEROES

THEY DIDN'T WEAR CAPES.

But they wore Sampson County Government nametags and official badges, raincoats and rainboots, safety vests and life jackets, and communicator headsets. And yes, even after many working hours, they wore weary, but comforting, smiles.

THEY DIDN'T SAVE THE WORLD, BUT THEY PROTECTED OUR COMMUNITIES.

They provided valuable information about dangerous weather conditions, sheltered more than 3,200 people and 200 animals, evacuated 77 people stranded by dangerous flood waters, safeguarded our roads and businesses during extended power outages, and provided food, water and supplies to those in need.

THEY DIDN'T LEAP TALL BUILDING IN A SINGLE BOUND, BEND STEEL WITH THEIR BARE HANDS, OR CONQUER EVIL VILLAINS.

But they did, over the course of the ten days, man an emergency operations center, a central receiving and distribution center, and 13 emergency shelters for people and pets. They answered, dispatched and responded to hundreds of emergency calls, monitored rising rivers and dangerous roads, repaired damaged water lines and protected critical infrastructure.

Our heroes are our 500+ county employees, who along with our colleagues from other counties and states and countless volunteers, worked tirelessly during Hurricane Florence.

Their superpower? A passion for public service that drives them to leave their homes and families to serve you, our citizens, in times of need.
